Early childhood educator Deb Schein's inspirational study of the spiritual development of young children has led to a potent new way to use nature experiences to catalyze the spiritual development of children and those in relationship with them. Deb specializes in professional development and workshops that integrate spiritual development, observation, documentation, art, nature, creating amazing learning environments, and exploring developmental domains for young children.

A lifelong Jewish and family educator, Rabbi Jeffrey currently directs the Amphibious Jew Project and Text Me: Ancient Jewish Wisdom Meets Contemporary Technology. Jeffrey's specialties include professional development and teaching Jewish texts that create family learning experiences.

Together they share their understandings of the 100 Languages of Children and the 70 Faces of Torah, a workshop for Jewish children and their families, through explorations of Jewish holidays, seasons and nature, text study, blessings, art, spirituality, and values / midot.
